I know the feeling, I've done it myself on several occasions. I've had everything from long distance in other countries, having an affair with a different man every few weeks, to a long term mistress relationship with the same person. I've never had anything happen to me, but I've been cheated on several times. Sometimes the other guy "punishes" you. Sometimes the other guy "talks trash" about you, or worse. Sometimes the other guy (and this is the worst, by far) both at the same time. Anyway, you must have been able to figure out what my point is. He's a low-ball guy. How can you know he's not going to try something? Once you're out of town with someone, it's easy to have a different sexual relationship with them. With you both being on your own turf, it's easy to have a sexual relationship with each other. You're not around anyone else. How well-received was the first season of How I Met Your Mother? Obviously, a show of this type has to deal with subjects that would make many people uncomfortable, so it would be reasonable to assume that it wouldn't get the audience numbers and critical acclaim of other sitcoms. However, it ended up being quite the success. Even if there is a reasonable excuse, you have to deal with the fallout. You're going to have to explain to your wife why you've been working late, and why you're not going to have a date for the next month or so. And, as your wife may have expected you to be responsible for the child, your excuse will have to be something that you can back up with evidence. The last thing you want to do is give your wife the opportunity to argue that you're a bad father because you 82157476af
